Collaborative technology platforms fueled by real-time construction data and artificial intelligence can help educate, train and assist construction teams to reduce non-essential site visits or adhere to new “social distancing” requirements.

By partnering the world's top construction data and management platforms under a common initiative, we can help more jobsites stay open right now, but also create the opportunity to implement longer-term solutions as the construction industry adapts to a post-pandemic reality.

This alliance recognizes that the COVID-19 threat is a unique global challenge that requires a new approach—we are committed to working together to keep the construction industry working and building a better future for everyone.

Ask a representative from any alliance member company how our technologies can help keep your sites safe.
